CONNECTION AND INSTALLATION

Depending on the application, the ways to connect this device would vary. This device could function as a converter, to convert from optical to digital coax or from digital coax to optical. This device could also function as a booster, where if using two cables of the same type on the input and on the output would amplify the signal in order for the signal to arrive clean at the cable end. This converter will also act as a splitter: by inputting TOSLink or digital coax - both outputs will be activated at all times.
